BIKE YOUTH

The workshop session began with transforming sheets of paper into zines, self-published works that empower individuals to share their unique perspectives and creativity.

Employing this medium, students sketched ideas for their projects, built upon their peers' concepts, refined their proposals based on feedback, and presented their final designs to the rest of the class.

Brooklyn STEAM Center x Pratt Youth teamed up with BikePort for an interactive charrette, promoting collaboration and storytelling through zine-making.

Students explored standard bicycle components and test rode various pedal-powered prototypes to gain hands-on experience.

These young scholars were not asked to reinvent the wheel, but to consider its (r)evolution.
